

From the Editor-in-Chief's Desk

The new issue of the journal is in your hands.

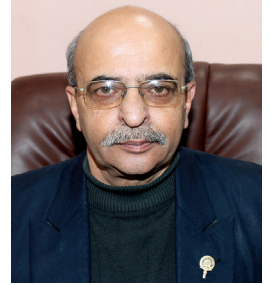

The journal has completed its one year journey of sharing knowledge. The whole credit goes to the editorial team and our contributors who have supported us by submitting good quality articles.

A new column in the form of Letters to Editor has been introduced from our next upcoming issue. The readers are invited to send their views about the published articles or they can share any other information about the recent advances in the area of medical science. Contributions can be also submitted as Original Articles for future issues.

It is reiterated that the journal has been indexed with Index Copernicus, so the articles published in the journal are eligible to be considered for all purposes as per MCI guidelines.

Suggestions for improvement in the contents of the journal are most welcome. If the readers wish to get some different types of contributions published in the journal they are most welcome to visit the official website of the journal with their suggestions.

Until then—happy and fruitful reading!
